

INDIGO

About the author

Louis Fischer (1896-1970) was born in Philadelphia. He served as a volunteer in the British Army between 1918 and 1920. Fischer made a career as a journalist and wrote for The New York Times, The Saturday Review and for European and Asian publications. He was also a member of the faculty at Princeton University. The following is an excerpt from his book- The Life of Mahatma Gandhi. The book has been reviewed as one of the best books ever written on Gandhi by Times Educational Supplement.

Notice these expressions in the text. Infer their meaning from the context.

urge the departure ,harbour a man like me, conflict of duties, seek a prop

When I first visited Gandhi in 1942 at his ashram in Sevagram, in central India, he said, "I will tell you how it happened that I decided to urge the departure of the British. It was in 1917." He had gone to the December 1916 annual convention of the Indian National Congress party in Lucknow. There were 2,301 delegates and many visitors. During the proceedings, Gandhi recounted, "a peasant came up to me looking like any other peasant in India, poor and emaciated, and said, 'I am Rajkumar Shukla. I am from Champaran, and I want you to come to my district!'" Gandhi had never heard of the place. It was in the foothills of the towering Himalayas, near the kingdom of Nepal. Under an ancient arrangement, the Champaran peasants were sharecroppers. Rajkumar Shukla was one of them. He was illiterate but resolute. He had come to the Congress session to complain about the injustice of the landlord system in Bihar, and somebody had probably said, "Speak to Gandhi."

Gandhi told Shukla he had an appointment in Cawnpore and was also committed to go to other parts of India. Shukla accompanied him everywhere. Then Gandhi returned to his ashram near Ahmedabad. Shukla followed him to the ashram. For weeks he never left Gandhi's side.

"Fix a date," he begged. Impressed by the sharecropper's tenacity and story Gandhi said, "I have to be in Calcutta on such-and-such a date. Come and meet me and take me from there." Months passed. Shukla was sitting on his haunches at the appointed spot in Calcutta when Gandhi arrived; he waited till Gandhi was free. Then the two of them boarded a train for the city of Patna in Bihar. There Shukla led him to the house of a lawyer named Rajendra Prasad who later became President of the Congress party and of India. Rajendra Prasad was out of town, but the servants knew Shukla as a poor yeoman who pestered their master to help the indigo sharecroppers. So they let him stay on the grounds with his companion, Gandhi, whom they took to be another peasant. But Gandhi was not permitted to draw water from the well lest some drops from his bucket pollute the entire source; how did they know that he was not an untouchable?

Gandhi decided to go first to Muzzafarpur, which was en route to Champaran, to obtain more complete information about conditions than Shukla was capable of imparting. He accordingly sent a telegram to Professor J.B. Kripalani, of the Arts College in Muzzafarpur, whom he had seen at Tagore's Shantiniketan school. The train arrived at midnight, 15 April 1917. Kripalani was waiting at the station with a large body of students. Gandhi stayed there for two days in the home of Professor Malkani, a teacher in a government school.

"It was an extraordinary thing 'in those days,'" Gandhi commented, "for a government professor to harbour a man like me". In smaller localities, the Indians were afraid to show sympathy for advocates of home-rule. The news of Gandhi's advent and of the nature of his mission spread quickly through Muzzafarpur and to Champaran. Sharecroppers from Champaran began arriving on foot and by conveyance to see their champion. Muzzafarpur lawyers called on Gandhi to brief him; they frequently represented peasant groups in court; they told him about their cases and reported the size of their fee.

Gandhi chided the lawyers for collecting a big fee from the sharecroppers. He said, "I have come to the conclusion that we should stop going to law courts. Taking such cases to the courts does little good. Where the peasants are so crushed and fear-stricken, law courts are useless. The real relief for them is to be free from fear."

Most of the arable land in the Champaran district was divided into large estates owned by Englishmen and worked by Indian tenants. The chief commercial crop was indigo. The landlords compelled all tenants to plant three twentieth or 15 per cent of their holdings with indigo and surrender the entire indigo harvest as rent. This was done by long-term contract. Presently, the landlords learned that Germany had developed synthetic indigo. They, thereupon, obtained agreements from the sharecroppers to pay them compensation for being released from the 15 per cent arrangement. The sharecropping arrangement was irksome to the peasants, and many signed willingly. Those who resisted, engaged lawyers; the landlords hired thugs. Meanwhile, the information about synthetic indigo reached the illiterate peasants who had signed, and they wanted their money back.

At this point Gandhi arrived in Champaran. He began by trying to get the facts. First he visited the secretary of the British landlord's association. The secretary told him that they could give no information to an outsider. Gandhi answered that he was no outsider. Next, Gandhi called on the British official commissioner of the Tirhut division in which the Champaran district lay. "The commissioner," Gandhi reports, "proceeded to bully me and advised me forthwith to leave Tirhut."

Gandhi did not leave. Instead he proceeded to Motihari, the capital of Champaran. Several lawyers accompanied him. At the railway station, a vast multitude greeted Gandhi. He went to a house and, using it as headquarters, continued his investigations. A report came in that a peasant had been maltreated in a nearby village. Gandhi decided to go and see; the next morning he started out on the back of an elephant. He had not proceeded far when the police superintendent's messenger overtook him and ordered him to return to town in his carriage. Gandhi complied. The messenger drove Gandhi home where he served him with an official notice to quit Champaran immediately. Gandhi signed a receipt for the notice and wrote on it that he would disobey the order. In consequence, Gandhi received a summons to appear in court the next day.

All night Gandhi remained awake. He telegraphed Rajendra Prasad to come from Bihar with influential friends. He sent instructions to the ashram. He wired a full report to the Viceroy.

Morning found the town of Motihari black with peasants. They did not know Gandhi's record in South Africa. They had merely heard that a Mahatma who wanted to help them was in trouble with the authorities. Their spontaneous demonstration, in thousands, around the courthouse was the beginning of their liberation from fear of the British.

The officials felt powerless without Gandhi's cooperation. He helped them regulate the crowd. He was polite and friendly. He was giving them concrete proof that their might, hitherto dreaded and unquestioned, could be challenged by Indians.

The government was baffled. The prosecutor requested the judge to postpone the trial. Apparently, the authorities wished to consult their superiors.

Gandhi protested against the delay. He read a statement pleading guilty. He was involved, he told the court, in a "conflict of duties"—on the one hand, not to set a bad example as a lawbreaker; on the other hand, to render the "humanitarian and national service" for which he had come. He disregarded the order to leave, "not for want of respect for lawful authority, but in obedience to the higher law of our being, the voice of conscience". He asked the penalty due. The magistrate announced that he would pronounce sentence after a two-hour recess and asked Gandhi to furnish bail for those 120 minutes. Gandhi refused. The judge released him without bail. When the court reconvened, the judge said he would not deliver the judgment for several days. Meanwhile he allowed Gandhi to remain at liberty.

Rajendra Prasad, Brij Kishor Babu, Maulana Mazharul Huq and several other prominent lawyers had arrived from Bihar. They conferred with Gandhi. What would they do if he was sentenced to prison, Gandhi asked. Why, the senior lawyer replied, they had come to advise and help him; if he went to jail there would be nobody to advise and they would go home. What about the injustice to the sharecroppers, Gandhi demanded. The lawyers withdrew to consult. Rajendra Prasad has recorded the upshot of their consultations—"They thought, amongst themselves, that Gandhi was totally a stranger, and yet he was prepared to go to prison for the sake of the peasants; if they, on the other hand, being not only residents of the adjoining districts but also those who claimed to have served these peasants, should go home, it would be shameful desertion."

They accordingly went back to Gandhi and told him they were ready to follow him into jail. "The battle of Champaran is won," he exclaimed. Then he took a piece of paper and divided the group into pairs and put down the order in which each pair was to court arrest.

Several days later, Gandhi received a written communication from the magistrate informing him that the Lieutenant-Governor of the province had ordered the case to be dropped. Civil disobedience had triumphed, the first time in modern India.

Gandhi and the lawyers now proceeded to conduct a far-flung inquiry into the grievances of the farmers. Depositions by about ten thousand peasants were written down, and notes made on other evidence. Documents were collected. The whole area throbbed with the activity of the investigators and the vehement protests of the landlords.

In June, Gandhi was summoned to Sir Edward Gait, the Lieutenant-Governor. Before he went he met leading associates and again laid detailed plans for civil disobedience if he should not return.

Gandhi had four protracted interviews with the Lieutenant-Governor who, as a result, appointed an official commission of inquiry into the indigo sharecroppers' situation. The commission consisted of landlords, government officials, and Gandhi as the sole representative of the peasants. Gandhi remained in Champaran for an initial uninterrupted period of seven months and then again for several shorter visits. The visit, undertaken casually on the entreaty of an unlettered peasant in the expectation that it would last a few days, occupied almost a year of Gandhi's life.

The official inquiry assembled a crushing mountain of evidence against the big planters, and when they saw this they agreed, in principle, to make refunds to the peasants. "But how much must we pay?" they asked Gandhi. They thought he would demand repayment in full of the money which they had illegally and deceitfully extorted from the sharecroppers. He asked only 50 per cent. "There he seemed adamant," writes Reverend J. Z. Hodge, a British missionary in Champaran who observed the entire episode at close range. "Thinking probably that he would not give way, the representative of the planters offered to refund to the extent of 25 per cent, and to his amazement Mr. Gandhi took him at his word, thus breaking the deadlock."

This settlement was adopted unanimously by the commission. Gandhi explained that the amount of the refund was less important than the fact that the landlords had been obliged to surrender part of the money and, with it, part of their prestige. Therefore, as far as the peasants were concerned, the planters had behaved as lords above the law. Now the peasant saw that he had rights and defenders. He learned courage. Events justified Gandhi's position. Within a few years the British planters abandoned their estates, which reverted to the peasants. Indigo sharecropping disappeared.

Gandhi never contented himself with large political or economic solutions. He saw the cultural and social backwardness in the Champaran villages and wanted to do something about it immediately. He appealed for teachers. Mahadev Desai and Narhari Parikh, two young men who had just joined Gandhi as disciples, and their wives, volunteered for the work. Several more came from Bombay, Poona and other distant parts of the land. Devadas, Gandhi's youngest son, arrived from the ashram and so did Mrs. Gandhi. Primary schools were opened in six villages. Kasturba Bai taught the ashram rules on personal cleanliness and community sanitation. Health conditions were miserable. Gandhi got a doctor to volunteer his services for six months. Three medicines were available — castor oil, quinine and sulphur ointment. Anybody who showed a coated tongue was given a dose of castor oil; anybody with malaria fever received quinine plus castor oil; anybody with skin eruptions received ointment plus castor oil.

Gandhi noticed the filthy state of women's clothes. He asked Kasturba Bai to talk to them about it. One woman took Kasturba Bai into her hut and said, "Look, there is no box or cupboard here for clothes. The sari I am wearing is the only one I have."

During his long stay in Champaran, Gandhi kept a long distance watch on the ashram. He sent regular instructions by mail and asked for financial accounts. Once he wrote to the residents that it was time to fill in the old latrine trenches and dig new ones otherwise the old ones would begin to smell bad.

The Champaran episode was a turning-point in Gandhi's life. "What I did," he explained, "was a very ordinary thing. I declared that the British could not order me about in my own country." But Champaran did not begin as an act of defiance. It grew out of an attempt to alleviate the distress of large numbers of poor peasants. This was the typical Gandhi pattern — his politics were intertwined with the practical, day-to-day problems of the millions. His was not a loyalty to abstractions; it was a loyalty to living, human beings.

In everything Gandhi did, moreover, he tried to mould a new free Indian who could stand on his own feet and thus make India free.

Early in the Champaran action, Charles Freer Andrews, the English pacifist who had become a devoted follower of the Mahatma, came to bid Gandhi farewell before going on a tour of duty to the Fiji Islands. Gandhi's lawyer friends thought it would be a good idea for Andrews to stay in Champaran and help them. Andrews was willing if Gandhi agreed. But Gandhi was vehemently opposed. He said, "You think that in this unequal fight it would be helpful if we have an Englishman on our side. This shows the weakness of your heart. The cause is just and you must rely upon yourselves to win the battle. You should not seek a prop in Mr. Andrews because he happens to be an Englishman".

"He had read our minds correctly," Rajendra Prasad comments, "and we had no reply... Gandhi in this way taught us a lesson in self-reliance". Self-reliance, Indian independence and help to sharecroppers were all bound together.

LISTEN TO THE STORY BEING READ

Click on the link below to hear the story. Pay attention to the pronunciation of the words.

Class 12 | Indigo | Louis Fischer | Audiobook

CHAMPARAN ON THE MAP

MAHATAMA GANDHI IN CHAMPARAN

INDIGO FARMERS (SHARECROPPERS)

INDIGO PLANT AND HOW THE BLUE DYE IS EXTRACTED

CHAMPARAN MOVEMENT COURT SCENE

SUMMARY

Indigo is an excerpt from Fischer's biography of Mahatma Gandhi and describes Gandhi's first successful movement in India—the Champaran Satyagraha (1917).

The story began with Rajkumar Shukla, a poor and determined farmer from Champaran (Bihar), who sought Gandhiji's help. The local peasants were being exploited by British landlords under the Tinkathia system, which forced them to grow indigo on a portion of their land and sell it at unfair prices.

Despite being busy, Gandhiji was impressed by Shukla's persistence and eventually agreed to visit Champaran. On reaching there, Gandhiji investigated the situation by collecting statements from the farmers. The British authorities tried to stop him and ordered him to leave, but Gandhiji refused and was ready to face legal action. His calm defiance and commitment to truth gained public support. The British could not imprison him because of that support.

Under pressure, the British government appointed an inquiry committee with Gandhiji as a member. As a result, the landlords were forced to refund a part of the money they had unfairly taken from the farmers. Although the compensation was small, it was a major victory because it broke the fear of the British among the peasants.

Gandhiji also worked to improve the villagers' lives by promoting education, hygiene, and self-reliance. The episode marked the beginning of civil disobedience in India and showed the power of nonviolent resistance.

Key Themes

- Oppression and exploitation under colonial rule
 - Power of nonviolence (Satyagraha)
 - Importance of courage and unity
 - Social reform and self-reliance
-

In one line:

The chapter shows how Gandhiji's peaceful resistance helped oppressed indigo farmers get justice and the confidence to fight against injustice, and gain justice.

VOCABULARY

1. Urge : to advise or try hard to persuade somebody to do something. I urge you to work hard for your exams.
2. Proceedings : events that happen, especially at a formal meeting, ceremony, etc. The proceedings were interrupted by demonstrations.
3. Emaciated : extremely thin and weak because of illness, lack of food, etc. After weeks of being stranded in the wilderness, the survivors looked weak and emaciated.
4. Resolute : having or showing great determination. Despite the heavy criticism, she remained resolute in her decision not to resign.
5. Committed : prepared to give a lot of your time and attention to something because you believe it is right or important. The company is committed to providing quality products.
6. Recounted : to tell a story or describe an event. He recounted his travel adventures to the family.
7. Tenacity : the quality of being very determined and persistent. Learning a new language requires a great deal of tenacity and daily practice.
8. On his haunches : refers to a crouching or squatting position where someone's knees are deeply bent and their weight is resting on their heels or feet. Haunches refers to the fleshy part of the body that includes hips and upper thighs . He crouched on his haunches to examine the animal tracks.
9. Yeoman : (in the past) a farmer who owned the land on which he worked. In early English society, a yeoman ranked above a tenant farmer.

10. Pestered : to annoy somebody by asking them something many times. The kids pestered me to buy them ice cream.
11. Harbour : to hide or protect somebody. You must not harbour an escaped convict.
12. Advent : arrival or coming. Life was changed forever by the advent of the internet.
13. Chided : to scold. She chided him for arriving late for dinner.
14. Arable : land or soil that is fertile and suitable for growing crops. Every farmer wants arable land.
15. Irksome : annoying and irritating. She found the restrictions irksome .
16. Thugs : violent persons, often criminals who can harm others. The shopkeeper was threatened by a gang of thugs.
17. Vast multitude : an exceptionally large , often overwhelming number of people or things . A vast multitude gathered in the streets to listen to the speaker .
18. Quit : to leave . She quit her job as manager of the volleyball team .
19. Spontaneous : done or happening suddenly , not planned . There was a spontaneous burst of applause in the middle of my speech .
20. Hitherto : until now. The expedition explored a hitherto undiscovered island.
21. Baffled : to be completely confused, puzzled or unable to explain something. The instructions were so complicated that I was completely baffled .
22. Pronounce a sentence : to officially declare something, normally a punishment . The family kept waiting for the judge to pronounce a sentence but the proceedings kept getting delayed.
23. Reconvened : to gather again after a temporary pause or adjournment. The court took a long break and reconvened late in the afternoon.
24. Desertion : is the act of willfully abandoning or leaving someone or something without permission. Abandoning a spouse or child can lead to a divorce on grounds of desertion .

25. Triumphed : to achieve success; to defeat somebody or something. India triumphed over Australia in the final.
26. Grievances : are formal, official complaints raised by an individual who believes they have been treated unjustly. A crowd gathered around the office of the Delhi Jal Board to voice their grievances about the bad quality of water.
27. Throbbled with activity : means a place is lively , and filled with incredible energy .
The city centre throbbled with activity during the annual festival of music and dance
.
28. Vehement : showing very strong feelings (often negative), especially anger. The opposition launched a vehement attack on the government.
29. Protracted : lasting for a long time. She was unable to work due to a protracted illness.
30. Crushing mountain : is a metaphorical or symbolic phrase used to describe an overwhelming or oppressive burden. The poor are often buried under the crushing mountain of debt.
31. Extorted : to get something by using threats or violence. The gang extorted money from small businesses.
32. Adamant : very sure, refusing to change your mind. The manager was adamant that the project must be completed by Friday.
33. Deadlock : a situation where two sides cannot reach an agreement. Talks between the two parties have reached a deadlock.
34. Unanimously : to be in complete agreement and share the same opinion. The jury reached its verdict unanimously .
35. Prestige : the respect and admiration that people feel for a person because they have a high social position or have been very successful. Graduating from an IIT carries immense prestige .
36. Trenches : long, narrow holes dug in the ground. The workers have been digging trenches all day for laying underground pipes.
37. Defiance : open refusal to obey. Her speech was a true act of defiance against the corrupt establishment.
38. Intertwined : things that are blended or linked closely together. Their personal and professional lives were so closely intertwined that it was hard to tell where the workday ended.

- 39. Pacifist : a person who believes that war and violence are always unjustified. He was widely respected in his community for his pacifist beliefs and commitment to non violence.

QUESTIONS FROM TEXTBOOK SOLVED

THINK AS YOU READ

Q1. Strike out what is not true in the following:

(a)Rajkumar Shukla was:

(i)a sharecropper (ii)a politician

(iii)delegate (iv)a landlord.

(b) Rajkumar Shukla was:

(i) poor (ii)physically strong

(iii) illiterate.

Q2. Why is Rajkumar Shukla described as being 'resolute'?

Q3. Why do you think the servants thought Gandhi to be another peasant?

THINK AS YOU READ

Q1. List the places that Gandhi visited between his first meeting with Shukla and his arrival at Champaran.

Q2. What did the peasants pay the British landlords as rent? What did the British now want instead and why? What would be the impact of synthetic indigo on the prices of natural indigo?

THINK AS YOU READ

Q1. The events in this part of the text illustrate Gandhi's method of working. Can you identify some instances of this method and link them to his ideas of Satyagraha and non-violence?

THINK AS YOU READ

Q1. Why did Gandhi agree to a settlement of 25 per cent refund to the farmers?

Q2. How did the episode change the plight of the peasants?

UNDERSTANDING THE TEXT

Q1. Why do you think Gandhi considered the Champaran episode to be a turning- point in his life?

Q2. How was Gandhi able to influence lawyers? Give instances.

Q3. What was the attitude of the average Indian in smaller localities towards advocates of 'home rule'?

Q4. How do we know that ordinary people too contributed to the freedom movement?

TALKING ABOUT THE TEXT

Discuss the following:

Q1. "Freedom from fear is more important than Legal justice for the poor."
Do you think that the poor of India are free from fear after Independence?

Q2. The qualities of a good leader.

WORKING WITH WORDS

1. List the words used in the text that are related to legal procedures.

For example: deposition

THINKING ABOUT LANGUAGE

Q1. Notice the sentences in the text which are in 'direct speech'. Why does the author use quotations in his narration?

Q2. Notice the use or non-use of the comma in the following sentences:

(a) When I first visited Gandhi in 1942 at his ashram in Sevagram, he told me what happened in Champaran.

(b) He had not proceeded far when the police superintendent's messenger overtook him. (c) When the court reconvened, the judge said he would not deliver the judgement for several days.

THINGS TO DO

1. Choose an issue that has provoked a controversy like the Bhopal Gas Tragedy or the Narmada Dam Project in which the lives of the poor have been affected.

2. Find out the facts of the case.

3. Present your arguments.

4. Suggest a possible settlement.

EXTRA QUESTIONS

Read the lines below and choose the correct answer.

Extract:

"But the lawyers thought Gandhi was totally wrong. They said, 'You are taking a big risk in going to the court.'"

Questions:

1. Who is referred to as 'Gandhi' here?
 - a) A lawyer
 - b) A farmer
 - c) Mahatma Gandhi
 - d) A British officer
2. Why did the lawyers think he was taking a risk?
 - a) He was poor
 - b) He was inexperienced
 - c) He was opposing the British authority
 - d) He was ill.
3. What does this extract reveal about Gandhi?
 - a) He was fearful
 - b) He avoided conflict
 - c) He was courageous and principled
 - d) He depended on others

"The peasants were sharecroppers. They had to give a part of their land to the British planters."

Questions:

1. What does 'sharecroppers' mean?
 - a) Landowners
 - b) Tenants who worked on others' land
 - c) British officials
 - d) Traders
2. Who were the British planters?
 - a) Indian farmers
 - b) Government officers
 - c) English landlords growing indigo
 - d) Soldiers
3. What was the main issue faced by the peasants?
 - a) Lack of water

- b) Forced cultivation of indigo
- c) High taxes only
- d) No education

"Gandhi declared that the British could not order him to leave Champaran."

Questions:

1. Where is Champaran located?
 - a) Gujarat
 - b) Punjab
 - c) Bihar
 - d) Bengal
2. Why was Gandhi in Champaran?
 - a) To start a business
 - b) To help indigo farmers
 - c) To meet officials
 - d) To travel
3. What does this statement show about Gandhi?
 - a) Obedience
 - b) Fear
 - c) Defiance against injustice
 - d) Carelessness

"The battle of Champaran is won!"

Questions:

1. Who said this line?
 - a) British officer
 - b) Rajkumar Shukla
 - c) Gandhi's lawyer
 - d) Gandhi's supporters
2. What does 'battle' refer to?
 - a) A physical war
 - b) A legal and moral struggle
 - c) A farming dispute
 - d) A political election
3. What was the result of this 'battle'?
 - a) Farmers lost
 - b) British became stronger

- c) Farmers gained justice
- d) Nothing changed

"Gandhi said, 'What I want is not your money, but your cooperation.'"

Questions:

1. What was Gandhi emphasizing?
 - a) Wealth
 - b) Power
 - c) Unity and participation
 - d) Education
2. Who was he addressing?
 - a) Britishers
 - b) Lawyers and people
 - c) Farmers only
 - d) Government
3. What does this line highlight?
 - a) Materialism
 - b) Leadership and values
 - c) Weakness
 - d) Anger

SHORT ANSWER TYPE QUESTIONS

Q1. Who was Rajkumar Shukla? Why did he come to Lucknow?

Q2. Where is Champaran district situated? What did the peasants grow there? How did they use their harvest?

Q3. How did the development of synthetic indigo affect the English estate owners and the Indian tenants?

Q4. Where did Gandhiji want to go? What happened to him on the way?

Q5. 'In consequence, Gandhi received a summons to appear in the court next day.' Which events of the previous day led to this state of affairs?

Q6. How did the refund-settlement influence the peasant-landlord relationship in Champaran?

Q7. Which other spheres besides political or economic fields received Gandhi's attention during his long stay in Champaran?

LONG ANSWER TYPE QUESTIONS

Q1. Why was Gandhi summoned to appear in the court? How did he gain his liberty ?

OR

'Civil disobedience had triumphed, the first time in modern India.' Relate the events during Gandhi's stay in Champaran that led to the triumph.

Q2. How did Gandhi work for rural uplift during his stay in Champaran?

Q3. Justify the appropriateness of the title 'Indigo' to this extract.